Where does our money go?

The treasurer's role

first in a series by Jim Tornoe

The treasurer's role in our club is perhaps best described in three broad areas of responsibility.

First is the fiduciary role, wherein the responsibility is seeing that our money, our assets and our integrity are safeguarded with minimal risk. That simply means no stupid investments, no slipshod handling of funds, paying those whom we owe on a timely basis and collecting from those who owe us.

Secondly is the accounting role of keeping the books—maintaining the checking and investment accounts, paying bills, depositing checks, making verbal and written reports to the Board and membership, comparing actual expense with budgets and providing analytical commentary for differences. We churn through our accounts about $25,000 in revenue and $25,000 in expenses in an average year, much of it $20 at a time—just to give you an idea of the volume of detail—and, keeping records of that detail so that it can be used for tax returns and is understandable for audits.

Thirdly is the financial leadership role—should we spend money for this or that, how much is appropriate, what limits should be set, who should have authority to spend. In other words, to provide some measure of spirited questioning and hardheadedness on behalf of the entire membership.

Sometimes the treasurer has to play the unpopular role of devil's advocate so that we keep balance in the discussions, especially when a charismatic salesperson is leading the cheering for an idea. Now and then when this role is overplayed the treasurer becomes the "naysayer" or "bean counter" as some like to call him or her. At other times the treasurer needs to be the one doing the cheerleading when opportunities present themselves.

So you see the job in our club is pretty much like that of any other organization that has money flows in and out. A member of a team, your board, trying to work for the betterment of the club. ■

Jim Tornoe, STPC's treasurer, has been a member of STPC since 1988. He has been Chief Financial Officer of Dayton's, Minneapolis, Hudson's, Detroit, B. Dalton Bookseller, and the St. Paul Plant of the Ford Motor Co.

Glen Gullikson heads up STPC membership recruitment drive

At their July meeting, the STPC Board of Directors endorsed a membership recruitment plan for reaching 1600 members by January 1996. The present membership stands at 1,372, which means gaining 228 new members.

Glen Gullikson is a well known tournament tennis player, father of Bruce, and uncle to the Gullikson twins, Tim and Tom. Glen is one of the charter members of the Senior Tennis Players Club and admired for his sportsmanship, cagey playing, and though he may usually win, he will commend you for your good shots.

Glen will be organizing a campaign with the help of George Erickson of New Brighton, who will plan the promotion for the campaign and Char Hall, the ever-moving, ever-thinking Membership Chair. Monthly reports will be available to you but this is an "every member recruits a new member" campaign.

As a bonus you can bring a new member or two to the First Annual STPC Picnic on Wednesday, August 30 at Highland Park in St. Paul. Don Bratt and Nat Watkins say space is limited so get in your reservations soon.

Senior Tennis Players Club is one of the best kept secrets in town. Let us all work together to change this image. ■

August 1995

AD IN

by Sue Larson
STPC President

Okay, tennis playing friends, so we're 50 and better than ever. Some of us can look in the mirror and our equipment seems to be on a biological mudslide; the pounds keep mounting though we barely remember the taste of a Snickers bar.

Well, let me tell you, as I observed over sixty senior tennis players at Wolfe Park today. I could only think that not only are we better than ever, many of us move like 40 year old tennis players and look ready for any style show — and this goes for both men and women!!

There's absolutely no need for a physical tuncup and attitude realignment for members of STPC. Let me tell you about the members of our board and what a lively, creative, hard-working, fun-loving group they are! You're missing a good show if you don't attend one of our board meetings. (The next one is August 16 at the Roseville Public Library at 1:00 P.M.)

Well, at our meeting on July 13, all members constantly raised their hands or just shouted out their welcome comments about our plans for the future. Dot Guenther and Bernice Hanson prepared extensive recommendations for the administration of our organization. The size of the board, the role of the executive committee, a change in the fiscal year, etc. are just a few of their well thought out recommendations.

The campaign to increase membership to 1600 members by January 1996 is progressing. The board adopted a plan to allow new members who join in September 1995 at the $20 membership fee to have their dues covered for all of 1996. Other parts of this membership campaign will be forthcoming, but with Glen Gullikson as the campaign chair, George Erickson working on promotion, Char Hall continuing her bang-up job as membership chair, you know new members will be found. Keep that in mind as you talk to friends who play tennis or would like to learn. Call Char at 474-5873 and she will give you details.

Another new project is Jim Tornoe writing a series called "Where Does Our Money Go?" The first of six articles starting in this issue of the Times is entitled "The Treasurer's Role". This series came about when, after a tennis session in Golden Valley, members started wondering about STPC's fiscal policies and where exactly the money goes.

Each new member needs to rapidly find a place that fits them within our organization. This means finding out about the training available, finding players of equal ability and knowing where to play and so on. For this purpose, the board has enthusiastically established a mentoring program. This program consists of eight coordinators from areas throughout our playing area who will match new members with well informed long-time members.

The Minneapolis and St. Paul Urban League will continue to be supported by STPC because the board feels their role in helping urban boys and girls, particularly minorities, is commendable. Our dollars are one way we can be of service to our young people.

Yes, we are 50 plus, but we are coming along, thanks to ideas from all of you. Please keep them coming. ■

National Senior Women's Tennis Association

Two Minnesota women, Cammy Johnson and Janet McCutcheon, are co-presidents of the National Senior Women's Tennis Association. Membership is open to all women age 25-80 and above interested in playing on a national level. The NSWTA's primary goal is to promote senior women's tennis and to act as an advocate in bringing the concerns of its membership before the USTA and tournament officials. The organization was founded almost 20 years ago. Membership dues are the NSWTA's primary source of income. These funds are used to publish a newsletter with tournament results and informative articles written by members.

Update on NTRP club ratings

Those of you who enjoy numbers may be interested in this analysis of the ratings given our STPC club members in the May 23 ratings clinic. The breakdown of figures for the most recent clinic is presented below, with comparative general figures for the two clinics.

May 23 clinic ratings

	Men		Women
	no.	%	no.	%
higher than self-rating	5	9.1	7	10.9
same as self-rating	31	56.4	45	70.3
lower than self-rating	19	34.5	12	18.8
Totals	55	100.0	64	100.0

It is interesting that, although nearly the same proportions of men and women received ratings higher than their self-ratings, a markedly smaller proportion of women than of men were downgraded by the pros, and a proportionately larger percentage of women than of men were given ratings equivalent to the self-professed ratings. Possible interpretations of this disparity are left to the readers.

A comparison of the ratings given by the pros in the two clinics, for men and women combined, are presented below.

Comparison with self ratings

	higher	same	lower
	4/26 clinic ratings	14	41
5/23 clinic ratings	9	65	26

The figures for the May clinic show a definite tendency to rate the participants the same as their self-ratings or lower. This need not imply a "halo effect" for the second clinic ratings, but could be explained by a number of factors, e.g., different pros doing the ratings, more women participating (reflecting the differences in ratings described above), the effect of the bad weather encountered in the first clinic, differences in self-perceptions of the second group compared to the first group, etc.

For those interested in more detail, only one person received a rating two steps higher than his self-professed rating while 9 persons received ratings one step higher. Thirty persons received ratings one step lower than their self-ratings, and one person received a rating two steps lower than his self-rating.

All in all it appears that the ratings program was a success, with 119 persons participating in it. As expected, NTRP ratings tended to be somewhat lower than the self-ratings, but not enough to be concerned about, for most purposes. ■ by John Stecklein

Who are the STPC members?

During our last membership drive, applicants were asked to provide information about their previous or current occupations or professions. This question was added because the Board thought it would be helpful to learn more about who the members of STPC were, their backgrounds, areas of expertise, etc. Although initiated just for information, it was also thought that such information might be useful at some later time if a need arose to contact a person or persons with certain expertise or experience to help with a problem of the Club.

The Board was gratified to learn that nearly 700 members supplied the requested information. We now have an occupational profile of our membership, based on about two-thirds of the total membership. Thanks go to all of you who provided the requested information.

To satisfy any latent curiosity about this profile, a simple breakdown of the larger categories of occupations and professions (those with 5 or more persons represented) is presented in the table below. ■ by John Stecklein

Close Encounters of the Surgical Kind or Pac-Man Redux

by George Erickson

“Get that one!” I shout, pointing to a ragged stalactite hanging from the cavern’s milk-white dome. As if in response, a stainless-steel tube angles upward, its Pac-Man-like head devouring the triangle of tissue. Then lowering its sights, it darts across the cavern’s floor, snapping up shreds of raw, bacon-like debris. And as it does, my wife and I lean closer to the television set, urging it on like frantic fans at a homecoming game; for the cavern we view lies inside my knee; the voracious little Pac-Man is the star of the show, and the game is called “Arthroscopy.”

My role began a year ago when, as the terror of the tennis courts, I attempted an Agassi, twisted my knee and, worse yet, played on, limping my way to the end of the set. I erred.

My doctor prescribed anti-inflammatories and TLC. When they failed, he suggested his own orthopedic surgeon, Dr. C., who injected cortisone, providing a marvelous, short-term recovery, and then a relapse.

Dr. C. then recommended surgery, the sort that uses a fiberoptic light/lens (an arthroscope) inserted through a small incision to illuminate and video the interior of the joint while the Pac-Man and his toothy friends tidy up inside my knee.

Though content with the advice of Dr. C., I consulted the real experts, my tennis friends, only to discover that most of them had already met the Pac-Man and recommended his work. Then came the jokes, usually about surgeons repairing the wrong limb, or even the wrong patient.

My buddy, Bill, never one to take chances, claims that prior to surgery he wrote across his good knee, “Not this one, dummy!” Being less confrontational, I considered encasing my good knee in a stovepipe—no access, and no offense. Two weeks later, I limped into MERCY Hospital, while pondering the implications of its name (they showed mercy—he begged for...) and followed the signs to SHORT STAY SURGERY.

After donning paper slippers, a gorgeous pea-green “gown” slit from stem to stern, and a pale-blue privacy robe, I am asked for the forty-third time, “And which knee are we working on today?”

“The left one,” I reply, though the imp inside me advises, “tell her the wrong one and watch her face.”

She hands me a copy of “the Patient’s Bill of Rights” (free speech while comatose), two patient education forms and a schedule called “Welcome To Short Stay Surgery,” which read:

“You will be called to the pre-surgical area at 8:30...

“Your surgery is expected to start at 9:00...

“You will arrive at Phase I recovery at approx. 10:30...

“You will be expected in Phase II recovery at 11:30...

“Your estimated discharge time is 12:30...”

I’d been warned that the ghost of Henry Ford haunts the halls of short-stay surgeries. One of my tennis friends, Fred the Unrefined, calls them the equivalent of “Wham. Bam. Thank You, Sam.” Fred, as usual, has it nailed, for the assembly line spirit prevails.

The beds in pre-surgery are lined up like race cars, four or five on either side of the room, all angled slightly toward the swinging doors. From my horizontal viewpoint, I study the driver to my left, a woman ten to fifteen years older than I. She’ll be no problem, but her bed looks fast. On my right is a younger guy so ensnared by pre-op sedation (and his comely nurse) that he’ll never see the starting lights.

The anesthetist strolls in, making small talk, and I wonder if he is embarrassed by the redundancy of his obligatory, “And which knee is it?”

As he checks it off his chart, I grin foolishly at my sudden recollection of his profession's more descriptive name: "gas passer."

He is followed by the affable Dr. C., who has apparently lost his chart. "So it's the right knee, is it?"

I stare at him briefly, wondering if he is serious, and conclude that he is. "No... it's the LEFT!"

Suddenly I am moving, leaving the gal in the flashy bed behind as I accelerate through the double doors.

The operating room is cool — to retard the growth of bacteria, they claim. But the real reason is more apparent: they have sold tickets and the place is SRO. Then, just as I am getting comfortable on the operating table and am about to toss a witticism to the crowd, the GAS PASSER pulls this dirty trick on me. No explanation, no warning, no counting down by sevens from one hundred and three. Suddenly — nothing.

I awaken in Phase One recovery feeling fully alert, but like a driver who suddenly finds himself 60 miles farther along I-35 than he expected. "What the hell?" he thinks. "What happened to Hinckley?"

As my copy of the surgery video plainly shows, somewhere near Hinckley the Pac-Man withdrew, surrendering his portal to a side-cutting Roto-Rooter, an expert at trimming the mohair-like cartilage that arthritis leaves behind, and to a tiny lobster claw that snipped away an interfering plica, pronounced "plecka." And although I have forgotten Dr. C.'s definition of "plica," it is apparently Latin for "something unexpected, but profitable."

Now three months post Pac-Man, I once again prowl the tennis courts and poach from my partner, who claims Dr. C. did his job much too well. I have paid all my bills — even the hospital's minutely detailed masterpiece that somehow missed "envelope: $6.48" and "first class stamp: $10.89." Unfortunately, the hospital's statement contained a surprise: the source of the hospital's name, which I learned when I got to the bottom line and heard my mind cry, "MERCY!" ■

The indoor schedule is ready. Please call me if there are any errors or mistakes.

We now have more courts available than we have ever had! We just need people to fill them. Here are the new courts, and how many additional people we need to take advantage of them:

- Daytona Club: we can have additional courts
- Decathlon Club: 24 players and 2 captains
- Flagship Club: 36 players and 3 captains
- Lilydale Club: 8 players and 1 captain
- Nicollet Tennis Center: 8 players and 1 captain
- Oakdale Club: 48 players and 4 captains
- Southdale Club: 24 players and 2 captains
- St. Paul Tennis Club: 12 players and 1 captain
- Wooddale Club: 40 players and 4 captains

These courts will be available until September 1. If we don't have players and captains by that time, we will give up these additional courts.

Two hundred more members can be accommodated, but you must volunteer now. Volunteer captains should call Chuck Slocum, 941-4059, and you will receive a letter of direction on how to proceed to form your own group. Volunteer players should also call me or preferably the club directly, and we will try to assign you to a group of similar skills if possible.

This is a great opportunity for our members and club. Let us take advantage of it as soon as possible. If we don't take advantage of this opportunity, we should no longer hear complaints about insufficient courts and places to play. ■
